

Intern with ETAN

Organize for Justice!

The East Timor & Indonesia Action Network (ETAN) is seeking interns.
Work for human rights and justice!

What is ETAN?

For 20 years, ETAN has worked in solidarity with the peoples of East Timor (Timor-Leste) and Indonesia. ETAN advocates justice for past rights violations, genuine self-determination for East Timor, and democratic reconstruction of one of the world's newest nations. ETAN supports human rights and democracy in Indonesia. Current projects include campaigning for justice for past human rights crimes, working to oppose military assistance to Indonesia, and monitoring the human rights situation in both countries. ETAN also pays close attention to events in West Papua.

What do ETAN interns do?

ETAN interns actively assist the movement for justice in solidarity with the peoples of Indonesia and Timor-Leste (East Timor).

ETAN interns gain experience, skills and knowledge in the areas of policy and political advocacy, international politics, writing, editing, media, fundraising, and organizing.

We are small office, so intern responsibilities will be varied depending on your skills and interests. These responsibilities can include research, writing and editing; maintaining and building relations with the media, other organizations and grassroots activists; administrative tasks; and monitoring and analyzing news and developments in Indonesia and East Timor. Interns also participate in educating Congress and other decision-makers, fundraising, organizing events, and other necessary tasks. Interns will help maintain and expand ETAN's presence in social media and the internet.

Interns work in Brooklyn, although it may be possible for especially motivated interns to work from elsewhere.

Compensation

While ETAN can not pay interns, we can work with your school program for credit. We may also be able to reimburse internship-related expenses.
